"The aforesaid minimum wage rates have been fixed by the Government subject to the following conditions and all these conditions shall be duly enforced by the employer;

1. Varying Dearness Allowance:

The dearness allowance calculation is done once a year. It shall be calculated every year on the first date of April on the basis of the average of the consumer price indices for twelve (12) months of the previous calendar year, and based on the annual average of the number of consumer price indices, the amount of excess or decreased is calculated. So the first calculation is the average of the Consumer Price Index (January 2020 to December 2020)

Based on this, it will come into effect from 1st April, 2021. Dearness Allowance at the rate of four (4) paise per day shall be paid to all categories of workers for every factor which exceeds the consumer price index of 7616 points. Method of calculating Dearness Allowance:-

a) Those receiving monthly salary:

Monthly Dearness Allowance = Consumer price that increases or decreases every year

Index Items (CPI) x Rate of Dearness Allowance x 30 days -

In the case of daily wage earners, the monthly wage rates shall be divided into twenty-six (26) days and calculated as follows, including payment of wages for four {4} holidays. If the rate of dividing is a fraction, it will be completed to the nearest rupee.

(b) Daily wage earners:

Dearness Allowance for the day = Factors that increase every year x Rate of dearness allowance x 30 days.

26

2. Payment of equal rates of wages to all in cases where women, men and transgenders have performed the same kind of work to be done.

3. For the workers of the same nature for the categories of workers whose class is not mentioned in the notification

4. The 8-hour working wage of workers working on a piecemeal basis should not be less than one day's wages of workers doing the same kind of work. A day's work shall mean 8 hours of work, and if workers are employed for less than 8 hours, the wages will be calculated on the basis of the day or monthly wages of that class according to such a short period of time.

5. Workers working on weekly offs or festival holidays fixed in the establishment shall be paid twice the normal wage, subject to the Minimum Wages Act and rules.

6. If a worker has worked for more than the stipulated period of the day, he shall be paid twice his salary for such additional period of work.

7. 75 per cent of the salary received by the employees of that class shall be paid as scholarship to the trainees.

8. Payment of salaries of employees by cheque or employees' bank
Should be credited directly to the account

9. A day's work shall mean eight (8) hours of work. If workers are employed for less than 4 hours of work, the minimum wages will be paid in accordance with such a short period of time.
